

Mrs. Kaber's Shrieks When Shown "Spirit Message" Set The Courtroom In Furore

"Don't Worry," Reads Purported Message by Special Delivery

CALLS HER DAUGHTER
Frantically Summons Marian To Her Side For Sympathy

BY MILDRED MORRIS
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.
COURT HOUSE, Cleveland, O., July 13—Bursting into wild shrieks, Mrs. Catherine Eva Kaber alleged husband slayer, threw the court room into a near panic today when her trial was resumed.

Mrs. Kaber's wild actions followed receipt of an alleged "spirit message" from Dan Kaber, her husband, who was stabbed to death by hired assassins.

She suddenly flung herself back in the chair, rending the air with her screams.

A bailiff caught her. She broke loose from his arms, falling to the floor. She was finally carried out by two bailiffs as her wild shrieks penetrated the court room.

"Marian! Marian!" she screamed, calling for her daughter.

The accused woman gave a terrified gasp as she read the purported message announcing that Kaber's spirit hovers at her side as she sits on trial charged with plotting his murder.

States witnesses have testified she sought the aids of spirits to have him killed.

"Forgive me the wrong I have done you," says the murdered man's message.

"Don't worry. You are safe from harm—always I am with you at your side."

The "message" came by special delivery.

Mrs. Kaber may not be able to take the stand today as planned in her effort, by baring the salacious details of her married life, to escape the death chair.

It required five officers to hold Mrs. Kaber later when she became hysterical during the testimony of her brother, Charles Brickell.

The brother, who had testified that she was "crazy" resented on cross examination the statement of Deputy District Attorney James T. Cassidy that his aged mother, also under indictment in connection with Kaber's murder, had once set the Kaber home on fire.

"That's a lie," shouted the young man. "My mother was sick and what is more, she was sore at my sister at the time."

Then came the wild shrieks of the accused woman.

She was removed to the judge's chambers.

"Keep your seats," shouted Judge Bernon as the court room crowd, chiefly girls and women, made a frantic rush for the doors.

The woman continued her screaming long after her removal from the court room.

"Marian! Marian!" she kept shrieking.

Marian McArdle, her daughter by a former marriage, is in jail awaiting trial for alleged complicity in Kaber's murder.

WIERINGEN, July 13—Germany's Crown Prince is looking for a regular job. In his own words he is quite fed up with the enforced life of monotonous inactivity on the lonely little submarine island which the sturdy Dutch by their strong dikes robbed from the green bay depths of the Zuyder Zee.

Not that his days are not occupied from dawn until dark; his correspondence, his memoirs, his horsehoe making at the village forge, his motorcycle, violin and sketchbook, his boxing instructor engage every minute of

Must Placate The Uninvited Nations

Disarmament Conference May Be Enlarged Later On

HARDING DISFAVORS

WASHINGTON, July 13—Interest in President Harding's proposed disarmament conference centered today in the allied reaction to official intimations here that the conference might lead to the establishment of an Association of Nations.

Although it is stated in official circles here that the administration would be very happy if the Association of Nations should be born out of the disarmament conference, it was rather plainly indicated that this proposal will not be thrust upon the allies as one of the tasks of the proposed parley, although it may be an outgrowth.

Administration leaders were today confronted with the problem of pacifying nations which have not been invited to the conference, but it was indicated that the President will not consider enlargement of the conference at this time, holding that too large representation would simply confuse the work and delay it. Suggestions made by the British dominion premiers that a preliminary conference be held at which the questions of the Pacific and the East be discussed did not meet with favor here. Administration leaders were of the opinion that the Dominion premiers, while having a right to a voice in the proposed conference, should express their views through the British representative and that the solidification of the views of Great Britain and her dominions is a matter which should be worked out in the dominion conferences now going on.

There was no indication here today that the President might extend his invitation to other nations, and while it was announced that the proposed conference would not interfere with the course of the administration in proceeding to make formal peace with Germany, there was no intimation that Germany might be invited into the parley, after peace has been established.

The administration is hopeful that the question of policy in the Far East may be taken up first by the proposed conference and that settlement of fundamental principles which this government believes are necessary to maintain peace in the Far East will logically lead to a disarmament agreement. It is the hope of the administration that all parties to the conference will come with their policies fairly well defined and that there will be no delays while questions at issue are made the subject of protracted discussions by the home governments.

Although the acceptance of Japan, the final acceptance, is reported from London, the administration had not received Japan's formal notification this morning, although there was every reason for officials to believe that the Far Eastern nation would finally agree to enter the conference.

Complete Plans For Conference On Irish Problem

Arrangements Made For Meeting of De Valera And Lloyd George

TO MEET THE PREMIER

Every Phase of Irish Question Will Be Discussed, It is Said

By International News Service.
LONDON, July 13—Final plans for the conference tomorrow between Eamonn De Valera, "President of the Irish Republic" and Premier Lloyd George were completed today. Following a meeting of the Irish delegation, at noon, DeValera exchanged messages with 10 Downing street (the official residence of the premier) regarding tomorrow's arrangements.

Official announcement was made at 2.30 this afternoon that Premier Lloyd George and De Valera will confer at 10 Downing street tomorrow afternoon, beginning at 4.30 o'clock.

De Valera, spent today conferring with Sinn Fein and English political leaders preliminary to his meeting with Premier Lloyd George tomorrow.

The Daily Telegraph warns against undue optimism, pointing out that the Dublin conferences between the Sinn Fein and the Southern Ireland Unionists were successful because all concerned carefully avoided anything definite on Ulster.

So far there is no sign of a compromise between Dublin and Ulster. On the contrary Ronald MacNeill, M. P., one of the Ulster leaders told the International News Service that he was sure that the London peace parley would fail owing to De Valera's insistence upon a republic in Ireland.

"If England gives the Sinn Feiners complete independence I see nothing for it but for Ulster to fortify her frontiers and prepare for civil war," said Mr. MacNeill. "So far as the conference concerns Ulster her position is that it has nothing to do with the northern province."

"Ulster has her own parliament and her own constitution. She will refuse to allow them to be interested with on any question. Any concessions on these points by Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster means immediate repudiation. The position taken by Sir Maurice Dockrell and Lord Midleton (two Southern Ireland Unionists) means nothing to the Unionists of Ulster. They are simply De Valera's nominees. As for De Valera it is certain he would not be allowed to negotiate except at the risk of his life on any basis but that of complete independence. And that is out of the question. Therefore, while I am anxious for Irish peace, I am without hope."

A formal meeting of the Irish delegation was held at noon at which De Valera presided.

Premier Lloyd George was not in London, as he had gone to his country estate at Chequers.

"It would have been better if a conference had never been proposed, but instead, more troops had been sent into Ireland. The present atmosphere should not have been allowed to rise. It only misleads public opinion."

"Englishmen and Americans do not understand Irishmen. They are unable to comprehend the meaning of the word compromise. I regard the west and south of Ireland just as I do the Balkan states in southeastern Europe. My chief fears are for the 350,000 southern unionists who, if the British troops are withdrawn, must evacuate the country or be exterminated. Their plight is pitifully awful."

Large bodies of auxiliary police who were granted leave of absence in Ireland on account of the armistice, are arriving in England.

There was much public curiosity over De Valera and crowds gathered about the Grosvenor Hotel hoping to get a glimpse of him. The Sinn Fein leader did not much resemble the head of a republic when he arrived. His hair was long and tousled. He wore an old tweed suit much wrinkled, evidence of the heavy strain he has been under. He told his friends that he was much gratified with the ovation given him and that he thought it augured well for his mission.

Crop Decrease Blamed On Drought In Jersey

Committee At Work On Tax Revision

House Ways and Means Committee Confers With Tax Experts

RELIEF IN A MONTH

BY A. O. HAYWARD
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

WASHINGTON, July 13—The work of preparing a tax revision bill was taken up today by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Experts from the Internal Revenue Bureau and committee officials sat down to frame a tentative draft of the changes to be made in the internal revenue laws along lines recommended by the treasury and approved generally by the Ways and Means Committee.

The tentative draft will be used as a working model by the committee as soon as it is freed of its duties in connection with the tariff bill which it is now busily engaged in putting through the House. Members of the committee expect to settle down to the tax revision task on Monday, July 25.

According to Representative Longworth, there will be little delay in completing the draft of the new tax laws. He stated that within two weeks from passage of the tariff bill the House will get the tax bill from the committee. While such speed may not be possible, it is the purpose of house leaders to jam tax revision through the House not later than August 20.

Until the tariff bill is passed by the House Ways and Means Committee, members can give little thought to tax revision. The committee is meeting every morning to consider amendments to the tariff bill that are being urged by house Republican members. The debate is developing the need of changes in various items in the bill and these most be considered by the committee for their bearing on the general scheme of rates in the bill.

House Republicans do not accept with complaisance frequent reports from the Senate that the tariff bill is to undergo "reconstruction" after it reaches the Senate Finance Committee. They are insistent also that there shall be tariff legislation at the present session, and that the bill shall not be shunted over to the next session of Congress by the Senate as has been intimated.

Representative Green, Iowa, asserted today there can be no just revision of tax laws until it has been ascertained with some degree of certainty what revenues are to be derived from tariff taxation.

Relatives Claim Girl's Companion Is Already Wed

Philadelphia Morals Court Increases George Rockey's Bail

OFFER HER FREEDOM

She Elects to Remain in Custody Until Man's Further Hearing

George Rockey, 22, of Silver and Amber streets, Philadelphia, who was taken into custody by Philadelphia detectives late last Friday night while in a rooming house on East Thompson streets, with Della Lodge, 19, of Otter street, Bristol, was held under $1,000 bail yesterday by the Philadelphia Municipal Court.

Rockey is to be given a further hearing on August 12th, according to the Court.

Della, was told by the Judge, that she could go to the home of her brother in Philadelphia until the next hearing if she so desired. It was through this brother's efforts that the two were apprehended. He had detectives searching for his sister. On her brother's advice, however, Della decided to remain in the custody of the court until the final disposition of the case against Rockey.

Rockey is said to have, after his arrest, claimed Miss Lodge as his wife. He did not produce any marriage certificate, it is said. Relatives and friends of the girl allege, however, that Rockey already has a wife and one child, two years old, who reside with his mother. The wife is reported to have been at the hearing yesterday and pleaded with the court to be lenient with her husband, as she wanted him to return to her. She is said to have claimed that he was her only support.

Just what the Morals Court will prosecute Rockey for is not known. The Morals Court is a branch of the Philadelphia Municipal Court and its workings are never made public.

Rockey, after his arrest last Friday, was held under $500 bail which was produced by his mother. After the preliminary hearing yesterday, at which but little evidence was brought out on either side, the bail was raised to $1,000.

Several Bristolians appeared before Albert Atkinson an official of the Income Tax Bureau of the Federal Government yesterday. Mr. Atkinson sat at the Hotel Closson and had previously notified a number of those who had made income tax returns to appear before him.

His reason for sitting here was to make corrections of errors in some of the 1920 income tax returns. Some of the summoned taxpayers had paid too much. These errors were corrected.

Mr. Atkinson, in the instances, wanted explanation on items entered on the return sheets.

Aviators Endeavor To Bomb Destroyer

Army Fliers in Search of German G-102 At Sea Today

NO "HITS" REPORTED

By International News Service.
LANGLEY FIELD, Hampton, Va., July 13—Despite low hanging clouds, army fliers took off and flew out to sea today to bomb the former German destroyer G-102. The first flight left Langley Field at 8:18.

At 9:45 no radio reports had come from the planes.

The weather at sea was reported fair.

All of the planes designated to take part in the attack had left Langley before 9 o'clock.

The first attack was made by small pursuit planes carrying small bombs. This attack was completed at 8:50.

An intercepted radio dispatch stated that the De Havilland planes had completed their attack at 10:30 and were returning to the base.

No direct hits had been reported by radio up to 10:45.

General Mitchell is in the air directing the attack of the Martin bombers, which was formed shortly after 10:30.

Forty six army planes, under the command of Brigadier General Mitchell, are getting their opportunity to demonstrate their ability in sinking seacraft in conjunction with the aerial bombing tests which are being conducted by the navy. The navy is co-operating in today's test on the ex-German destroyer, but the land planes of the army, flying to an objective more than a hundred miles from their base, are leading in the attack.

Two types of planes have been selected by the army men for the attack, the big twin-motored Martin bomber and the speedier de Havilland battleplane. The Martin bombers are equipped with six 250 pound bombs each, and will fly in divisions of three planes. The smaller and speedier planes will carry two bombs apiece and fly in divisions of two.

No restrictions have been placed upon the army bombers. They may choose their own formation and method of attack, and may bomb the anchored destroyer from any altitude.

General Menoher, chief of the army air service, is watching the tests today with Captain A. W. Johnson of the naval aviation forces, on board the U. S. S. Shawmut, the mother ship of the air forces which is cruising about close to the target.

A destroyer path has been formed from Hampton Roads to the target and elaborate preparations have been made for the rescue of any plane which may come to grief while at sea.

On the Henderson there is a large group of aerial experts, today's test being considered the most important yet held in the series.

Residents Back Merchants' Truck Diversion Plea

Business Men's Petition Circulated Among Radcliffe Street People

NEW ROAD SOON OPEN

Want the Heavy Auto Truck Traffic Sent Out Pond Street

Motor caravans passing through here guarded by men fully armed is now a reality. It is the result of a series of robberies in which the trucks along with their valuable cargoes were often stolen. In some instances, the loot amounted to thousands of dollars.

The transportation companies operating the trucks claimed that they could no longer stand the losses which confronted them and stated that if the State could not properly protect the highways that they would take the risk themselves and place armed guards on the trucks. This they have done, and nightly big caravans are passing through here with armed guards seated alongside of the chauffeurs.

One night this week a string of fifteen big motor trucks, one behind the other went through. Guards were on each truck and fully armed. Trucks traveling in daytime are carrying one extra man besides the chauffeur, as a protection against robbery.

Truck traffic just now is not as heavy as it was a few weeks ago. This slackening up is attributed to the general business depression throughout the country.

On July 4th part of the Lincoln Highway was opened and machines were permitted to travel over the unfinished portion of the highway so that traffic through here would be relieved.

Work on concreting the Highway is progressing and it is expected that today or tomorrow the work of laying the top dressing will be started. It will be many weeks though before the traffic is permitted to use the Highway.

The steel work for the bridges over the canal has arrived and is to be placed in position shortly. After this is done, it is not likely to be long before most of the heavy truck traffic will pass along Mill street and up Radcliffe street to the new roadway at Tullytown.

Several weeks ago business men along Mill street framed and started circulation of a petition which is to be presented to the Street Committee of Council. The petition requests the diversion of the heavy truck traffic up Pond street from Mill street. The object in view is the elimination of heavy traffic through the business section of Mill street, which traffic is to the detriment of the business men and their customers, and its elimination from Radcliffe street, a residence street, and one also carrying trolley traffic.

This petition was signed by Mill street merchants with great unanimity and it is now in the hands of Walter F. Leedom, for circulation among residents of Radcliffe street for signatures.

Mr. Leedom said today that he had been busy and had not time to canvass for signatures during the past few weeks, but that he intended to start tonight and solicit signers. Then the document is to be forwarded to the Street Committee of Council for action.

The business men claim that the heavy through traffic along Mill street is not only a detriment to them, but to the townspeople in general. Custodian (Continued on Page 4, Col. 2.)

THE VOTERS WHO DO NOT VOTE

The right of suffrage is greatly coveted by those who do not possess it, while it seems to be all too lightly regarded by many who have it. The latter are usually those who most loudly deplore the way in which the affairs of government, national, state and municipal, are being conducted. If a qualified voter neglects his privilege and duty to take part in the direction of governmental affairs by making use of the ballot, he has no right to complain of the way others direct them. Those favored by the right of suffrage owe it to themselves and the entire community that they shall exercise that right. There are many who refrain from voting for fear that they may be called upon to serve on juries if they exercise the right of franchise.

It is evident that Hon. W. F. Wakeman, Treasurer and General Secretary of the American Protective Tariff League, is of the opinion that if an individual can vote and won't vote, he should be made to vote, as witness the following letter, which appeared in the New York Tribune of June 26th:

"SLACKER" VOTERS

To the Editor of the Tribune.

Sir: I should like to see these suggestions discussed:

That qualified voters shall register and vote at every election.

That every qualified voter who does not register and vote at every election shall pay a fine of $10.

That this "slacker" list of voters who are qualified to register and vote shall be the first or preferred list for jury duty.

That the informant receive one-half of the above fine.

I am a firm believer in the future of this Republic, provided all qualified voters vote. I fear for the future of this Republic with the present large number of "slacker" qualified voters.

FEDERAL BOARD ON BUSINESS PROSPECTS

The lengthy review of financial and commercial changes which the Federal Reserve Board has just issued contains the gratifying statement that readjustment has been effected in most lines of business, and inferentially tenders to us the hope that the prevailing commercial depression is nearing the end. Light is visible ahead through the darkness.

While the main elements are improved, the Board adds in the report: "On the contrary, there are many factors which seem to make it sure that still further work in the direction of readjustment must be accomplished before even a price stability can be arrived at."

It is necessary, of course, that deflation should follow inflation. The vital feature of deflation is contraction of credit. Were contraction of credit brought about rapidly and imperatively, there would be a destructive crisis, with thousands of failures. Consequently, time is a necessary element in readjustment. The liquidation of costs and prices, accompanying the contraction of credit, is not uniform, and it always happens that many reductions are speedy and excessive, while others are slow and uncertain. By price stability the Federal Reserve Board means advances of prices which are too low and further decline of prices which are not yet low enough.

That the situation is still fraught with several hazards is very obvious. Europe cannot buy from us until it establishes bases for credit and secures a quantity of gold, but it is not improbable that the necessity of foreign nations will spur them to rearrange credit, before the close of this year, for buying food-stuffs, clothing material and certain manufactured products, and the principal benefit of this will redound to farmers and others who are burdened with large discounts. There are many dubious phases to the protective tariff, and this legislation may be either very helpful or very injurious.

There seems to be good foundation for the expectation that the liquidation will run its full course during the coming autumn and winter, with some improvement in business in the latter months of the year, and that the readjustment will be such that commerce will begin to move in greater volume by next spring. This forecast appears to be justified by the implications drawn in the Federal Reserve Board's report. At the same time, there does not seem to be much ground for the predictions of certain industrial leaders that business will not get under headway for two or three years. Business will not wait that long, but will begin to move as soon as the readjustment is completed.

THE "CHINESE WALL" FALLACY

The present administration is committed to the policy of protecting the labor and industries of this country by means of the imposition of an adequate Tariff. Adequate Protection has always been held by Protectionists to mean a Tariff high enough to equal the difference between the production costs in this country and foreign competing countries. It has usually been held that the American producer is entitled to some advantage, but certainly he is not entitled to a prohibitive Tariff. Protectionists have been accused of desiring to erect a "Chinese Wall" against the products of other countries, but that is not and never has been the policy of sincere Protectionists.

There has never been a more consistent Protectionist than William McKinley and he stated on the floor of Congress that he was in favor of a Tariff no higher than would be necessary to equal the difference between the production cost of any domestic article and the production cost of the competing foreign article. He would give the domestic producer an equal chance, so far as production costs are concerned, with the foreign producer. That would prevent the domestic producer from taking advantage of a prohibitive Tariff to raise his prices inordinately high because of the lack of foreign competition. Nowadays we would say that it would prevent profiteering. During the presidential campaign, President (then Senator) Harding expressed similar views. The idea of sound Protectionists is that the Tariff must be adequate, but not prohibitive. Personally, we believe that Tariff should be somewhat in excess of the difference between domestic and foreign production costs, so that the domestic producer shall have an advantage over the foreign producer.

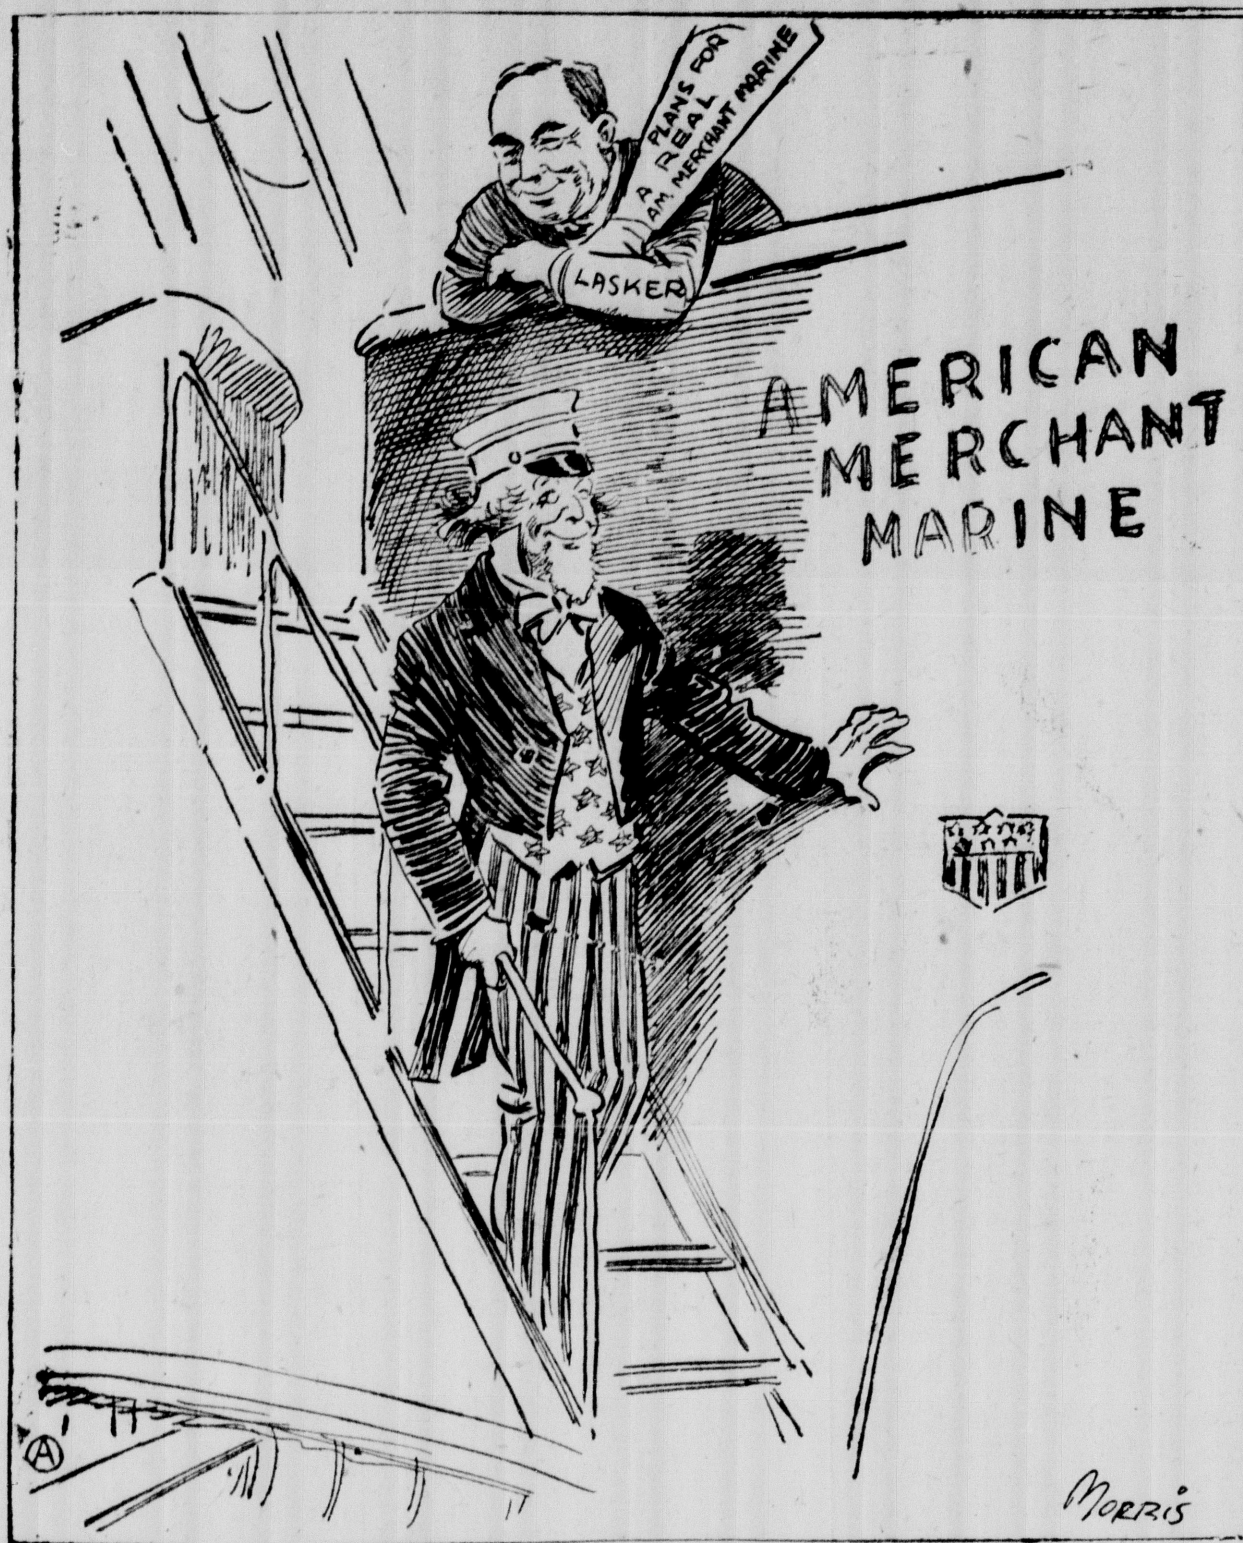

It is claimed that "full professors" at the colleges should get $5000 a year. Are professors supposed to be full under prohibition?

The bankers are planning to mobilize the money of the country, while the folks who are trying to buy cars on borrowed funds want to automobilize it.

By direct negotiation the United States has taken up a few questions with Japan, including the Island of Yap, immigration, alien land ownership and the return of Shantung to China. They rather sound like puzzles.

The State Department has informed Congress that traces of salt have been found in Mexican oil, which implies that the fields are being drained and the wells are rapidly being exhausted. A little more seasoning, and Mexico will be prepared to relish order and commerce.

The Courier does not assume responsibility for the views expressed in such letters.

Editor of the Courier:—

Sir:—In your issues of July 5th and 9th you do what we consider an injustice to the Italian citizens of the Fifth Ward.

Your article on July 5th states that a "crowd" of Italians threatened Policeman Kessinger while he was trying to arrest a man named Mike Puchino. To the contrary, however, Policeman Kessinger's testimony, at his hearing before Justice of the Peace Cooper, at Tullytown, was to the effect that the only one to threaten him was Puchino.

Your article does the Italian citizens of the locality an injustice in its inference that the Italians there assemble in crowds and defy law and order. This is not the case, for the law abiding element is in a majority among the Italians of the ward.

The inference of the headlines on the article in your issue of July 9th is that the American residents of the Fifth Ward are, or were, terrorized by the Italians. The way the headlines read it would appear as if all the Italians of that ward, or locality had banded themselves together to terrorize and make life miserable for law abiding Americans.

The fact is that the alleged "terrorism" was exerted by a few residents of Elm street. These people are Italians it is true but we resent the inference that they are in any way representative of the Italian citizenry of the ward, or of the city of Bristol.

As far as our knowledge goes, the persons responsible for these threats and annoyances of other residents of Elm street are not even citizens.

There are hundreds of respectable and law-abiding Italian residents of the Fifth Ward, and in entire Bristol, and they feel very keenly this aspersion upon them. We trust that you will give space to this communication drawing attention to your error.

Yours very respectfully,
The Italian American Citizens Republic Club.

Wealthy Widow Marries Cape Cod Laborer

DENNIS Mass., July 13.—"You meet true love in a laborer's overalls quite as often as in a tailor-made suit."

So declares Mrs. Lucy S. Royle Dickson, wealthy widow of fifty years, who has become the bride of Fred Dickson, twenty-four-year-old Cape Cod laborer.

"My ambition," she says, "is to spend my time quietly here on Cape Cod near to Nature's heart, with work and play and love—and Mr. Dickson."

"When a heart truly loves, twenty years, more or less, amounts to naught. As love laughs at locksmiths, so does love laugh at years."

"The reason a mature woman, especially a widow, can capture the heart of a young man is because she is unselfish. For the young man always talks and thinks of herself. The mature woman forgets herself for her true love."

COMMENT ON TIMELY TOPICS

WM. H. TAFT

William Howard Taft has been honored with the highest judicial position in the land. It is quite fitting that he should be thus honored. The learned expresident is given a desirable berth and the country will enjoy for years to come the benefit of his excellent talents which, thru political maneuvers, had been only grudgingly recognized some time ago.

It is interesting to note the varied political fortunes of eminent statesmen. As the tide mounts higher their fame seems assured of lasting qualities. Inevitably there is, however, the receding which flows oftentimes to oblivion. This does not necessarily indicate a fickleness of the world, but it points strongly to that. It is one of those subtle phases of humankind that must be analyzed as an element and one that must be considered by those who enter public life.

The man of the hour too frequently lasts only sixty seconds. It is the great man who survives the flurries of his fame. Mr. Taft's appointment must be a great satisfaction to him for he now knows that his works have lived thru the ebb. Another great public servant is tasting the bitterness of the reflux. Bent and aged with the years of service his figure must excite feelings of sympathy in the hearts of men who are keen enough to see thru the sand glass and know that its trickling is slow and deliberate. There is succor for him knowing (tho he may not, like his fellow expresident, survive the coming into his own) that the hand that records is not guided by the impulse that so readily tears down that which displaces the eve in its nearsightedness.—Sellersville Herald.

VALUE OF FREE-TRADE PROPAGANDA

Propaganda in order to have any force, must have at least some foundation being based on false premises. Trade propaganda has no such foundation, being based on false premises and false conclusions. The truth is not in Free-Traders. This is well illustrated by the following editorial from the May 28th issue of that irreconcilable irresponsible Free-Trade paper the Louisville Courier-Journal.

"You are a farmer and you believe that the tariff, Emergency Tariff Act, passed on the pretense of helping you, will help you. Well, here is one of the first things this Tariff does:

"In the event of the Emergency Tariff Bill now before the Congress of the United States becoming a law, which provides for an increase in the duty on 96 degrees test Cuba centrifugal raw sugar of .5952 cents per pound the value of all out-standing contracts of standard fine granulated sugar shall be increased .63 cents per pound, in accordance with sugar trade rule

18, effective upon the opening of business on the day following the signing of said bill by the President.—Bulletin of New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

"Are you going to get any of that increase in the price of sugar, or are you going to help pay it?"

The value of the above may be seen when it is considered that "standard granulated sugar" is being sold in New York and vicinity at the present time at six cents per pound. It is easy enough to answer the query of the Courier-Journal. Since sugar is now selling for a less price per pound than before the increase in the Tariff, we are under the impression that we will neither receive nor pay "any of that increase." As a false prophet, the Courier-Journal "runs true to form." It had better get out of the "prophesying" business.

OBSERVATIONS

Great numbers of people going down to Washington to pay honors to the present and incidentally to demand appointment to public office.

The government investigations may not accomplish much, but anyway they give employment to the investigators.

Gingham dresses have always been regarded as working clothes and the women get 'em out so stylishly now that they can use 'em to work the men with.

The people who are fiercely demanding that the United States assert all its rights, might help on the cause by attending one of the military training camps.

Among the folks whose vacation is over and who must now go to work, are the superfluous employees who are being turned out of the government departments at the rate of 1000 a month.

Those who believe that Japan or Great Britain is getting ready to attack this country, would probably not like blazes if their taxes were increased to pay for defense.

"The rest o' that ar party done gone upstairs to roost," said the minister. "I reckon my dog'll keep 'em thar. We better jest tote these men inter the house an' have a prayin' bee. I've got a right smart good chander, now, to whop o' Satan."

They moved the raiders' horses. Then the party—save Harry Needles, who stayed in the grove to keep watch—took its captives into the cabin. Three of them were boys from eighteen to twenty years of age. The other was a lanky, bearded Tennesseean some forty years old. One of the young lads had hurt his hand in the evening's frolic. Blood was dripping from it. The four sat silent and fearful and ashamed.

Sarah made tea and put it with meat and milk and doughnuts and bread and butter on the table for them. Samson washed and bandaged the boy's wound. The captives ate as if they were hungry, while the minister went out to feed his dog. When the men had finished eating Samson offered them tobacco. The oldest man filled his pipe and lighted it with a coal. Not one of the captives had said a word until this tall Tennesseean remarked after his pipe was going:

"Thankee, mister. You done been right good to us."

"Who told you to come here?" Samson demanded.

"Twere a man from St. Louis. He done said you hated the South an' were holpin' niggers to run away."

"And he offered to pay you to come here and burn this house and run Traylor out of the county, didn't he?" Abe asked.

"He did—yes, suh—he suah did," answered the man—like a child in his ignorance and simplicity.

"I thought so," Abe rejoined. "You tackled a big job, my friend. Did you know that every one of you could be sent to prison for a term of years, and I've a good mind to see that you go there. You men have got to begin right now to behave yourselves mighty proper or you'll begin to sup sorrow."

Stephen Nuckles returned as Abe was speaking.

"You jest leave 'em to me, Mr. Lincoln," he said. "These be good men, but o' Satan done got his hooks on 'em. Mis' Traylor, ef you don't mind, I be goin' to do a job o' prayin' right now. Men, you jest git down on yo' knees right hyar along o' me."

It is recorded later in the diary that the rude Shepherd of the prairies worked with these men on their farms for weeks until he had them wanted to the fold.

CHAPTER XI.

In Which Abe, Elected to the Legislature, Gives What Comfort He Can to Ann Rutledge in the Beginning of Her Sorrows—Also He Goes to Springfield for New Clothes.

Radford's grocery had been so wrecked by the raiders that its owner was disheartened. Reinforced by John Cameron and James Rutledge he had succeeded in drawing them away before they could steal whisky enough to get drunk. But they had thrown much of his goods into the street. Radford mended his windows and offered his stock for sale. After a time Berry and Lincoln bought it, giving notes in payment and applied for a license to sell the liquors they had thus acquired.

Late that autumn a boy baby arrived in the Traylor home. Mrs. Onstott, Mrs. Waddell and Mrs. Kelso came to help and one or the other of them did the nursing and cooking while Sarah was in bed and for a little time thereafter. The coming of the baby was a comfort to this lonely mother of the prairies.

There is a letter from Sarah to her brother dated May, 10, 1833, in which she sums up some months of history in the words that follow:

"The Lord has given us a new son. I have lived through the ordeal—thanks to His goodness—and am strong again. The coming of the baby has reconciled us to the loss of our old friends as much as anything could. It has made this little home dear to us and proved the quality of our new friends. Nothing is too much for them to do. I don't wonder that Abe Lincoln has so much confidence in the people of this country. They are sound at heart, both the northerners and the southerners. Harry Needles is getting over his disappointment. He goes down to the store often to sit with Abe and Jack Kelso and hear them talk. He and Samson are getting deeply interested in politics. Abe lets Harry read the books that he borrows from Major Stuart of Springfield. The boy is bent on being a lawyer and improving his mind. Bim Kelso writes to her mother that she is very happy in her new home but there is something between the lines which seems to indicate that she is trying to put a good face on a bad matter. Abe has been appointed postmaster. Every time he leaves the store he takes the letters in his hat and delivers them as he gets a chance. We have named the new baby Samuel."

One evening, of that summer, Abe came out to the Traylors' with a letter in his hat for Sarah.

"How's business?" Samson asked.

"Going to peter out, I reckon," Abe answered with a sorrowful look. "It will leave me badly in debt. I wanted something that would give me a chance for study and I got it. By jing! It looks as if I was going to have years of study trying to get over it. Have you got any work to give me? You know I can split rails about as fast as the next man and I'll take my pay in wheat or corn."

"You may give me all the time you can spend outside the store," said Samson.

That evening they had a talk about the whisky business and its relation to the character of Eliphalet Biggs and to sundry infractions of law and order in their community. Samson had declared that it was wrong to sell liquor.

"All that kind of thing can be safely left to the common sense of our people," said Abe. "The remedy is education, not revolution. Slowly the people will have to set down all the items in the ledger of common sense that passes from sire to son. By and by some generation will strike a balance. That may not come in a hundred years. Soon or late the majority of the people will reach a reckoning with John Barleycorn. If there's too much against him they will act. You might as well try to stop a glacier by building a dam in front of it. They have opened an account with slavery, too. By and by they'll decide its fate."

Such was his faith in the common folk of America whose way of learning and whose love of the right he knew as no man has known it.

College Girl Is

Forest Fire Lookout

EUGENE, Ore., July 13—Miss Dorothy Dickey, junior at the University of Oregon, seems to have a high aim in life, and so far she has been successful in the accomplishment of her desires. She is to be a forest fire lookout on Horse Pasture Mountain, 6,000 feet above sea level, again this season following her competent observation work at the same post last year.

From July 10 until some time in September—depending upon the start of the Fall rains—Miss Dickey will occupy one of the two major lookout posts in the McKenzie River district, located about eight-five miles from Eugene. In order to reach her place of employment she must travel fifteen miles of the distance on foot, with a pack-horse to carry her belongings.

Last Summer the university girl was the first observer to locate sixteen forest fires.

"I can hardly wait till it's time to go again," Miss Dickey said when asked if she liked her work. "It isn't lonesome up there. We have visitors almost every day. Last year four days was the longest time we were without a caller. My mother and sister stay with me, and we have a good time."

WE NEEDED HELP

by JACK FARR

Ex-Crown Prince Believes That He Must Find Work

take the packages brought by the Major, the ex-Crown Prince's former aide, who had met me in Amsterdam.

Few alterations have been made in the Oosterland pastor's home, which the Netherlands Government placed at the disposal of the ex-Crown Prince. The same reed rugs on the floor of the narrow entrance hall appear to have seen childish feet transformed to tottering age. The same worn red stair-carpet leads to the second floor, divided into two bedrooms—one for the ex-Crown Prince and one for the Major. The primitive bareness of the accommodations stands out in startling contrast to the comfortably-appointed, roomy apartments which even the man of small salary enjoy in Berlin.

There is no bathroom; there is no bathtub; there is neither sewage nor plumbing. Water is carried in a bucket or pitcher and poured into an old-fashioned washbowl. Petroleum lamps or candles furnish the light. Iron stoves heat the rooms in the winter.

"How do you like my island?" he asks. I have to admit that, from what I have seen in a trip from one end to the other of Wieringen, it would take a long stretch of imagination to find anything to boast about.

The ex-Crown Prince immediately champions the islanders, who, he says, are honest and big-hearted folk. When he came here the people were filled with anxiety about the unknown ex-prince. But today their own "Kroonprinz" is very popular, from the children clumping along in their wooden shoes to the grandfather fishermen, with their grizzled cheeks fringed with white.

"I must get away from here; and I am going to do so. Naturally I wish to return to my country—to my wife and children. One mustn't forget that I have been separated from my family for seven years." The ex-Crown Prince became silent. Then he gets out the framed portraits of his four sons and two daughters. The eldest son fifteen years of age, is interested in farming. The next son thinks he would like a business career. There is a photograph of the ex-Crown Princess. "It's been seven years of separation, with only a few weeks during the war."

Financial worries also have their influence in the desire of the ex-Crown Prince to leave Wieringen. An allowance received from his father has made it possible for him to get along until the present time. There have been many reports of money smuggled to Holland for the Hohenzollerns; surely one finds no traces of it at Wieringen, even comforts are lacking.

"I wish to retire quietly to my estates in Silesia which need my attention. But if ultimately political difficulties should make impossible my return to my own land I must get out of here and seek another field of activity. I am thirty-nine years old and must be given an opportunity to put my energy into some constructive work."

"In 1914, shortly before the war Ambassador Gerard had the kindness to invite me to Amreica to go moose hunting. I would have come had the war not prevented."

"I have heard from a friend in California, with whom I am in correspondence, that the American people are quite tired of war talk and everything which pertained to the war. That's a healthy sign of a country's reconstruction. For this reason I am glad to see that Rathenau met Loucheur in Wiesbaden. It's a very important and desirable step towards a better understanding between France and Germany. Churchill recently publicly announced that a satisfactory reconstruction of Europe could only be attained by thorough understanding and co-operation between England, Germany and France."

"But California must be a beautiful place to live. A small farmer near us here, who with his wife spent three years in California, tells me that it is a paradise. I hope that the day may come when I may visit that beautiful country."

"Do you know Jack London's books? And James Oliver Curwood's? They are delightful. I have several dozen of them. Out-of-door life and fighting the elements has always appealed to me."

"Have you any horses here?" I asked.

"Before the war I had thirteen splendid horses, but I have none now." The Crown Prince is a passionate horse man and a good polo player. But there is no place on his little island to ride. The narrow stone roads are not suitable for horses and the farmers would be horrified at the thought of flying hoofs tearing up the soil they have salvaged from the sea.

A motorcycle is today the only substitute for the thirteen horses. The Crown Prince is a good rider, although he has had four bad spills on the narrow roads. He takes care of his motorcycle himself. "You know, to me there is something human about a piece of machinery."

The Crown Prince is a careful reader and discussed with interest the German, English and French post-war books. He is well informed on international and German politics for he subscribes to seven Berlin newspapers including the Socialist organs.

The Crown Prince hasn't left St. Helena a dozen times in the last two years. On the exceptional occasions he takes the oily little motorboat to the mainland either to Doorn or to the dentist. The burgoemeister accompanies him. The 3,000 inhabitants of Wieringen do not support a dentist. The Crown Prince has had enough of Wieringen; he is looking for a field where he can work.

Residents Back Merchants' Truck Diversion Plea

mers are afraid to park their autos along that thoroughfare because of the heavy traffic and as a result the business of these people is lost. The trucks rumbling by at high speed, are also very dangerous to pedestrians, horse and light vehicles.

Then it is claimed that the trolley traffic and auto traffic too is too much for the one street to handle and that a real danger menaces the public.

THEATRES

Forrest Theatre

Mae Murray, the popular screen star, will appear tonight at the Forrest Theatre in the title role in "A Mormon Maid," a great drama reflecting the countless tragedies of a great menace.

"A Mormon Maid" is a sensational motion picture drama exposing the inner evils of polygamous marriages and customs in Utah. It is presented under the auspices of the National Anti Mormon League. It shows how converts are made, often by force and terrorism, how husbands new to the faith are brow-beaten and cudgeled into taking plural wives, how attractive girls in the faith and out are forced into polygamous marriage with men they fear, and how men and women in the faith and out who rebel against plural marriage are punished, often with death, by the Mormon system's bands of Avenging Angels. The drama presented in the picture is a fact tragedy showing the experiences of one young woman who refused to accept the fate assigned to her. It is a screen play of big emotions, a story of conflict in Utah sometimes in the open under great expanses of sky, sometimes in the public temples of the Mormons, sometimes in the inner temples where the mysteries of the faith are preserved from the curious. And it is a tale of Mormonism of today in many of its aspects as well as it is a tale of Mormonism of the past.

New Colonial Theatre

A romance of love and superstition in Louisiana is perhaps the most apt way to describe the splendid feature offering at the New Colonial Theatre tonight only. The real title, however, is "The House of the Tolling Bell." It is a J. Stuart Blackton production starring May McAvoy, Bruce Gordon and an all-star cast.

Seldom is a photoplay created which carries so convincingly the atmosphere of its locale. The story is centered in a quaint corner of Louisiana untouched and unswayed by the hand of progress since the days of slavery.

Commodore Blackton's technical director traveled for two weeks through the outlying districts of Louisiana in search of a location which would correctly serve for the exteriors of the feature. He was rewarded by locating a struggling village inhabited by poor folks of French extraction; all descendants of the early Arcadians who settled in Louisiana following their deportation from Nova Scotia.

so famously recorded in Longfellow's Evangeline.

Situated on a sluggish tributary to the Mississippi River, slowly decaying in an atmosphere of indolence and superstition, the houses, the roads the very people are unchanged since the days of the Civil War. Even the old-fashioned clothes worn by the natives strangely suggest the fashions of anti-bellum days, influenced by the tenacious French ideas of a still earlier period.

No more quaint community exists in the United States today, and as the locale for "The House of the Tolling Bell" it is superb because of its singularity and vividness.

P. R. R. Ball Team To Meet Department Nine

The P. R. R. Maintenance of Way baseball team of Bristol will cross bats with the Phila. Passenger Trainmen of Philadelphia, on the former's grounds South Bristol, Friday evening 7-15-21 at 6 P. M., Day Light Saving time.

This aggregation of trainmen are piloted by a former Bristol ball tosser, one of the old school passenger conductors, Elmer White.

Nothing would be more pleasing to the Sullivan boys than to trim this aggregation from Philadelphia, as for several weeks back there has been more or less argument as to the superiority of the two teams.

It is hoped by the manager of the Sullivan boys, that upon this occasion the local fans of P. R. R. boys will turn out and give the local boys their support in plenty of the good old time rooting.

Johnson's Indians Defeat Female Nine

Johnson's Indians last night ventured outside of the third wad to cross bats with the team of Colored Ladies which for the past few nights has been entertaining local baseball enthusiasts on the vacant lots.

The game was played on the Sullivan diamond at South Bristol and it was some game. The colored ladies wore bloomers and some had shoes with French heels. Several of the female players were so heavy that male runners had to substitute for them on the bases.

The boys gave the women an awful wallowing when they won the game by the score of 3 to 0.

"Babe" Ruth "Panned" WORCESTER, Mass., July 13—There is at least one coterie that refuses to get excited over Babe Ruth or his home run exploits. It is Worcester's clergy. In fact, the "Babe" is receiving no little "panning" here, it being declared he has little claim on the admiration of fandom aside from his wielding of his war club.

MAE MURRAY

"THE MORMON MAID"

This is one of the best six-reel offerings of many months, considered purely from the viewpoint of dramatic development, atmosphere and stirring, convincing action, and it has a great additional advantage in that it is a bold statement of alleged conditions in the Mormon Church in years gone by.

The Lost Needle

HERE'S an old English play known as "Gammer Garton's Needle." Its plot is woven around the loss of the family needle—no trifling misfortune in the days of old.

Today, in this era of ours, life is so rich in comforts that we seldom wonder how folks got along in the ancient world. And we sometimes forget what an important role advertising has played in making life pleasant and altogether livable.

Advertising has one of the leading parts in the eternal drama of dollars. To it is directly due much of the multiplication of products and services which has come about during the last half century.

It has smoothed the mechanics of existence—made life easier and more pleasant by bringing countless necessities—once considered luxuries—within our easy reach and into continuous use.

Think of this when you read these columns. You owe much to advertising.

And you miss much when you fail to read it!
